

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to methods of identifying multi-finger Zf polypeptides that bind to a sequence of interest. Zf polypeptides identified using the methods described herein can have affinity and specificity for their target sites that is superior 5 to those produced by alternative methods.